

Be a star at bakersfield.com

The Bakersfield Californian's Interactive Media division has an opening for a multimedia intern and is seeking a dynamic person to shoot video, produce webcasts and create other digital content for Kern County's dominant websites.

Our last video intern went on to fame and fortune by creating "The Annoying Orange" comedy series that blew up on YouTube and The Cartoon Network. We can't guarantee you'll be a star like Dane ... but we're on a roll.

We're looking for someone who enjoys the thrill of chasing breaking news, creating self-contained video stories, and helping to produce webcasts and other digital content. We're launching several new online products this fall and need talented people who want to share the thrill of creating something long-lasting from the ground up.

Applicants should:

- Have strong writing-for-video skills.
- Be willing to have fun.
- Be able to appear on camera and do stand-up reports in the field.
- Want to see their work on YouTube and Kern County's most popular local websites.
- Have experience with non-linear editing software, including Final Cut Pro X, Adobe Premiere and Avid.
- Understand the importance of live video production and equipment.
- Be willing to discover something new every day.
- Be comfortable executing multiple assignments and hitting tight deadlines.

This position is full time, requires some night and weekend work, driving and regular lifting of camera gear.

Interested individuals should submit a resume/application to:

The Bakersfield Californian
ATTN: Human Resources - Multimedia Intern
PO Box 440
Bakersfield, CA. 93302-0440
Fax: 661-395-7484

or E-mail: jobs@bakersfield.com with interested job title in subject line

 Bakersfield.com

All applicants are subject to a pre-employment drug screen and a background investigation. Equal Opportunity Employer